Alcohol ordinance adopted, council infighting continues

Mayor pro tem Lois Heiserman began Tuesday night's City Council meeting with a prayer asking for divine guidance, but in the end, she compared her squabbling colleagues to what she went through raising her three sons.

The meeting got off to a good start when Mayor Brian Cochran recognized Public Works Director Tim Fleming for his 15 years of service to Lemon Grove.

The city received a claim from Jim Brikho, owner of Skyline Farms Market and Skyline Home Video, for damages and loss of business totalling $119,853.50 due to the County Water Authority's pipeline project. Brikho has also filed his claim with the contractor and the water authority. The city denied the claim, which is the first step in proceeding with a lawsuit. The city has an agreement with the water authority that the authority will defend the city in any claims resulting from the project.

The first of three hearings was an appeal by Chevron USA Products Company of certain conditions imposed by the Planning Commission when Chevron applied for a Conditional Use Permit (CUP) in order to make modifications to the Chevron station at Massachusetts and Broadway which is leased to Larry Hageman.

Christopher Diamond, a Los Angeles consulting engineer speaking for Chevron told the council that of 54 similar facelift projects which Chevron had undertaken in the area, Lemon Grove was the only governing body which required the company to go through the CUP process.

However, he wasn't complaining about that, but rather about a few of the 36 conditions which the Planning Commission had listed as conditions for approval. One was the requirement for Chevron to execute an irrevocable offer of dedication on Massachusetts and another was that Chevron not oppose the formation of an assessment district for street improvements on Massachusetts. Diamond explained that the dedication of land would harm the operating efficiency of the already snug station, and that the assessment district could end up costing the company $400,000 - an amount that would be hard to withstand. He also explained that although Chevron owns both the station and the car wash land parcels, they operate under two separate businesses with two distinct leases and that under the conditions of the leases Chevron is responsible for maintaining the gas station and Hageman the car wash. Therefore, Diamond suggested, it is improper to attach conditions of improving the car wash business to the CUP for the gas station modifications.

The council seemed moved by the arguments presented and somewhat shocked and embarrassed that Lemon Grove was the only entity requiring the company to go through the CUP process. They voted 4-0 (with Councilman Burns absent) to grant the appeal.

The station will soon shine with new signage, new landscaping (the concrete bed on the Massachusetts side will be planted similar to the planter on the Massachusetts side), new gas pumps and a new bullet-proof cashier's booth - now standard equipment for all Chevron stations.

The second hearing concerned the removal of the Special Treatment Area Overlay (which limited the use to car dealerships) for the vacant land on the south side of Federal Boulevard, formerly owned by Lee White and now belonging to Bank of America. The bank had agreed to sell the land on the north side of the road to Bob Baker, separately, if the city would consider removing the overlay on the land on the south side.

The problem was that the process to get the General Plan Amendment and Zoning Reclassification changed to remove the special treatment designation costs the property owner $1,500. And several residents felt it was unfair to remove it for Bank of America, who could afford the $1,500, but leave the other five smaller parcels on the south side with the special designation. A representative of the VFW post accused the council of legal extortion, saying that they didn't asked to be put in the area, and shouldn't have to pay to get out.

The council voted 4-0 to approve the changes for Bank of America, and directed staff to look into taking action to remove the overlay on the five smaller parcels on the south side of Federal.

The third hearing was to consider a Planning Commission recommendation to reclassify to parcels of land in the 1900 block of Englewood Drive from neighborhood commercial to residential low medium. Linus Schmidt, property owner, stated that he no longer opposed the change, and council approved by 4-0.

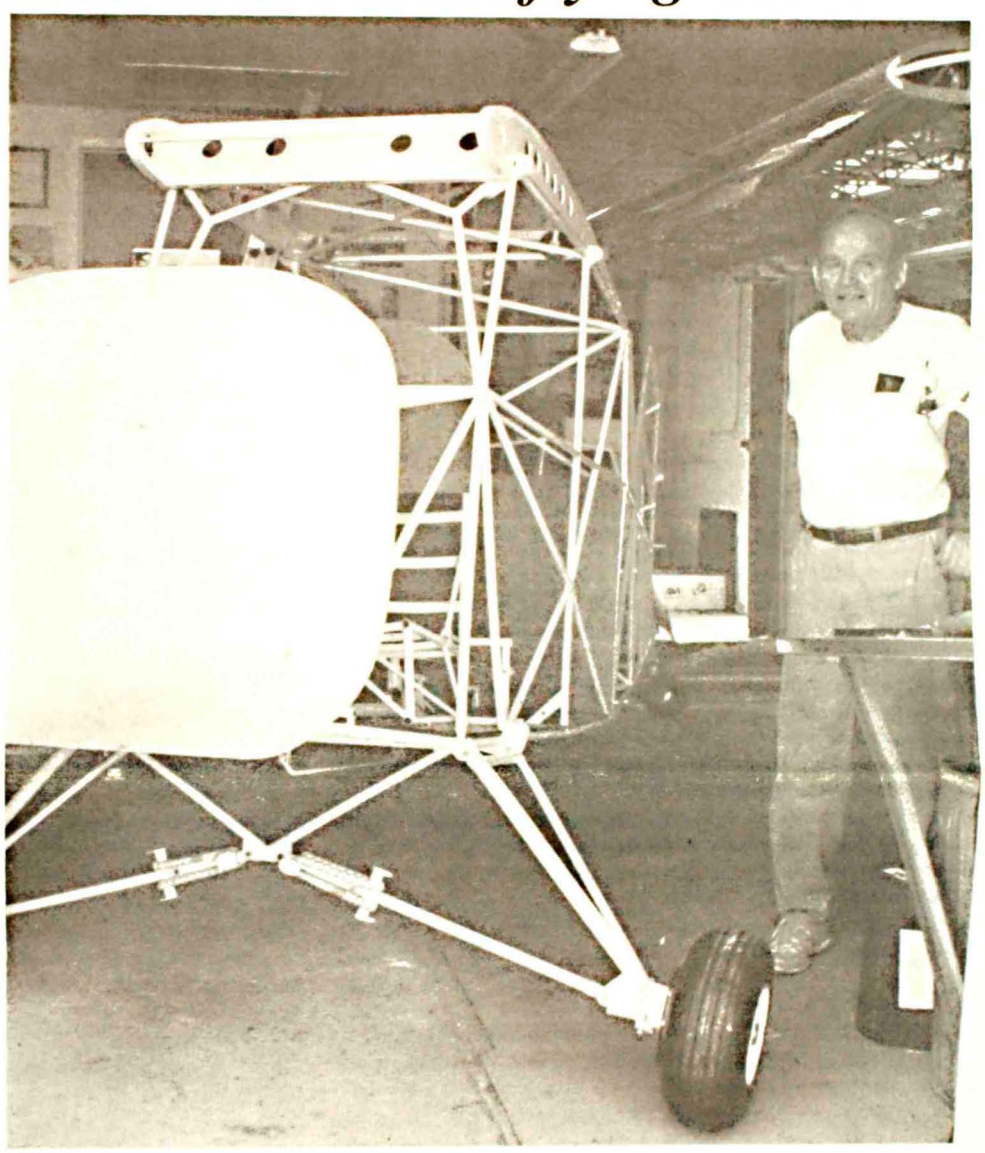
Vinson's incredible flying machine



by Lindy Magner

Though at this point it sort of looks like a jungle gym on wheels, its builder is sure that this workshop project will fly.

For the past 3 1/2 years, Lemon Grove resident Bob Vinson has been welding away the hours, constructing a tubular fuselage for a single-engine plane he hopes to complete and take to the skies in about two more years.

A retired boat builder, he got the idea to build a plane rather than buy one when a nearly finished kit plane pictured in a magazine caught his eye.

"It's almost a replica of the Aeronca Champ, a plane I flew in the 1940s. When I saw it, I knew I wanted to build it," he said of the Christavia kit plane, designed by a Canadian.

Since then, he has been corresponding with an Alabama man who's competed his kit building and took bravely to the air.

"He says it flies great," Vinson said, adding that he is the only member of the Experimental Aircraft Association's local chapter building this particular model. According to Vinson, the designer basically applied aerodynamics to the vintage shape, creating a better, faster plane. When equipped with a Cessna engine, the two-seat plane is expected to cruise at speeds of 100-110 m.p.h.

"They've learned so much since then about how to keep a plane clean so it slides through the air."

Also, the wood fuselage of the '40s is now made of a material similar to stainless steel, and its wings, which he has constructed from balsa-like wood, will be covered with dacron rather than cotton.

He notes that it probably would be less expensive to buy a used factory-made plane, but then, he's always been a builder.

Starting out as a boat carpenter, he worked his way up to supervising the construction of custom-made sail and motor boats as well as tugs.

"I'm used to this type of work, constructing something from the architect's drawing to the finished product," he said.

He doesn't know how many hours he's spent on plane construction so far, but he says he goes at a leisurely pace. However, when he's completed his pet project, it will be a day to remember.

"Oh, when I'm taxiing down the runway, I'll be excited and very happy." he said. Once it's completed, it will be inspected by the Federal Aviation Administration (FAA) before it can be licensed.

"They put home-built planes through a safety inspection and mark off what you need to improve; then you have to log 40 hours of test time not going far from your home field," he explained.

Of course, before he can take his creation up, the 69-year-old will have to secure that ever elusive pilot's license he first sought about 50 years ago.

"I'm still a student," he laughed. "I started lessons then, but I quit when I ran out of money," he said, noting that he has now racked up more than enough flying hours for a license, but still has to take the required cross-county and nighttime flights.

He plans to show off his plane-in-progress at the Experimental Aircraft Association Fair, which will be held at Brown Field Oct 16-17, 9 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Still moving along harmoniuosly, the council approved three resolutions: setting the cost of minor use permits and conditional use permits for existing businesses selling or serving alcohol at $25, so they don't have to pay the customary $250 fee; approving the actual agreement with San Diego Youth Involvement for administering the community service portion of the graffiti ordinance; and appropriating funds for activities approved at the last meeting.

Finally, the council gave the second reading to the ordinance regulating the sale of alcoholic beverages, and adopted it by a 4-0 vote.

Karen Zaustinsky, executive director of the Lemon Grove Prevention Project applauded the council's action, stating, "Many community members have been advocating this ordinance for nearly a year. It's passage is a celebration of their efforts and an important step in reducing alcohol-related problems and creating a healthier environment."

Obituary

G. Harlan Dye

Longtime Lemon Grove businessman G. Harlan Dye died of cancer Oct. 1 at his La Mesa home.

The son of George Humphrey Dye, a popular baseball player, and Lenora Ann Jarboe, Mr. Dye was born in Enid, Okla. on March 5, 1916 and lived with his parents while attending St. Joseph's academy, graduating in 1932.

He then spent two years in the Texas panhandle before moving to San Diego County, where he spent the remainder of his life. He worked at Consolidated Aircraft in San Diego until 1948, then Helix Water District and Daniels, Brown & Hall Engineering and Surveying Co. until 1954.

He then formed his own survey company (Dye Surveying Inc., Lemon Grove) after being licensed in 1953 by the state of California.

He married Victoria A. Aceves in 1940 and they had six children.

The couple lived in La Mesa for 50 years where Mr. Dye built his own house with the help of friends and relatives.

Since 1959, Mr. Dye was a member of Lemon Grove Rotary serving as its president during 1964 and again in 1982. He also served as president of the San Diego Chapter of California Council of Civil Engineers and Land Surveyors in 1981.

He was a charter and life member of the California Land Surveyors Association, a life member of American Congress of Surveying and Mapping as well as of of the Consulting Engineers and Land Surveyors of California and taught surveying in an apprenticeship program at San Diego City College.

He was an avid tennis player, gardener, enjoyed traveling and was a prominent member of St. Martin's Catholic Church in La Mesa. For many years, he played Santa Claus at surrounding schools and for various organizations. He will be remembered for his kindness to others and devotion to his family.

He is survived by his wife, Victoria; son, Howard Dye, now owner of Dye Surveying, Inc.; daughter, Isabel Baker, administrator of a CPA firm in La Mesa; son, Richard Dye, a school administrator, Yuba City; daughters Cecilia Ciremele, a school teacher in Valley Center, Dorothy Miller, a school teacher in El Cajon, and Rosalie Beck of San Diego; three brothers, Charles of Albuquerque, N.M., Robert of El Cajon, and Jerry of Memphis, Tenn.; a sister, Frances Nance of Pasadena, Texas; and 14 grandchildren.

In lieu of flowers, the family requests donations to Grossmont Home Health Hospice, P.O. Box 9004-La Mesa, Ca. 91944-9004.

Teachers vie for honors

San Diego County's four Teachers of the Year will be named during a live cable television ceremony Saturday, Oct. 9, from the Civic Theatre in San Diego. "A Salute to Teachers," the 20th annual Teacher of the Year Awards, will feature the naming of the 10 finalists, a one minute video profile on each finalist, performances from top musical groups from schools throughout the county, and finally, the naming of the four winners.

"A Salute to Teachers' is a program that should make all teachers proud," said Harry Weinberg, San Diego County superintendent of schools. "The teachers honored represent the nearly 20,000 dedicated teachers in San Diego County whom we entrust with our children's future."

The black-tie event is sponsored by the San Diego County Office of Education, and the four major cable operators in San Diego County: Daniels Cablevision, Dimension Cable Services, Southwestern Cable TV and Cox Cable. This is the third year the cable operators have contributed cash and resources to produce and televise the program.

The four Teachers of the Year will receive $1,000, a crystal apple, a television and a VCR for their classroom, and will advance to the California Teacher of the Year competition. Each finalist will receive $500 and a crystal award.

Selection of the finalists and the winners was conducted by an expert panel which examined the 33 entries. Each of the teachers entered already has been named Teacher of the Year in his or her school district.

The program also will include the naming of the four winners of the countywide Cable in the Classroom awards program. The awards honor teachers for best use of cable television's educational programming in their classrooms.

Following are the East County Teachers of the Year, their schools, school districts and cities in which they reside.

- Lyndee Alton, Chet Harritt School, Santee, San Diego.
- Barry Bosworth, Granite Hills High, Grossmont Union, San Diego.

B-Words Personal comments of Councilman Bob Burns

Subjects

There has been some comment of late about the "Lemon Grove Review debates."

I have been pondering a way to assuage the whiplash of point-counterpoint that has evolved from my articles, the responses to same and of course my rebuttals. It seems as if this has taken over the B-Words column, and it is tiring. Since I have always been loathe to allow things said about me or my positions on issues to go unanswered, I must continue to do so. However, I do not wish to continue the practice which is monopolizing my writing of late.

So, since I have written extensively on many subjects over the last three years, I will be glad to supply a copy to anyone who might want to request it. A self-addressed, stamped envelope of letter size, sent to Box BB Lemon Grove, Ca., 91946 will get you a copy of a past column on any subject that is desired. If by chance I haven't expounded on an issue, I will respond with one.

I have always tried to cover things that I believed to be of interest to the people of Lemon Grove, and will continue to do so on a regular basis. The mail that I get in my BB-Box is of great assistance in making a determination of choice of subjects. So, from now on, if anyone wishes to hear my side, or an enlargement of what I write in a column, please do the above and be patient. With the recent declaration that I am wealthy, which, of course, is false, I must ask that requests for money be excluded, and I also do not relish telling anyone about my "operations." All other questions will be answered to the best of my ability, and for what they are worth.

On another subject, in less than a year from now the voters of Lemon Grove will be electing, or re-electing, three seats on the City Council. In the interest of balance and the democratic process, I would hope that interested residents will make it a race by taking out nomination papers and join the fun of city government. A healthy debate and exchange of ideas will keep our city viable and informed. For those who do not know it, it actually costs very little to be placed on the ballot. I believe that the last time, it cost a little over $200 to pay for a candidate's statement which is optional but a very good idea. A serious candidate should reveal a stand on local issues, both on the sample ballot and at the public forums. Other than that, only a few signatures are required to qualify.

I know that there are many well-qualified men and women in Lemon Grove who could continue the job of guiding our town. New ideas, new energies, new talents, and infusions of just plain old common sense, are the vital signs that make for a happy and successful city. Experience in any vocation is always valuable. However, in government it does not always mean that it must be in a technical field.

In the old days, a man or woman who was a success at running a business, or a home, or a family in a responsible and progressive fashion, made the best public official. Fair priorities, simple arithmetic, thrift, and the courage to make the decisions that benefit the majority, are not things learned in college alone.

For the continuation of our city with the "best climate on earth" as the city that is the "best place on earth," let us see some new blood in Lemon Grove.

If you have any questions or suggestions for Dr. Burns, send them to P.O. Box BB, Lemon Grove, CA 91946

School Trustees oppose Proposition 174

Saying it would do "great harm to the state's ability to provide public education for all students," Trustees of the Lemon Grove School District went on record this week as opposed to Proposition 174.

The District's Governing Board adopted an official resolution of opposition to the initiative, saying it would force them to slash as much as $1.8 million from the District's $18 million budget.

"Proposition 174 will cut 10 percent of neighborhood school budgets, money which is desperately needed by the 5 million students in California public schools, and give that money to families who already have children in private schools," the board's resolution states.

In a report to the board on the fiscal impact of the initiative on Lemon Grove schools, Superintendent Dr. Joe Farley said it would mean an increase in class size, reductions in staff, the possible elimination of student transportation and other major cuts.

"While the financial issues associated with the proposition are important reasons to vote against it," Farley said, "the basic flaws in the proposition itself are also compelling reasons for voting it down."

Farley said the initiative would transfer taxpayer money from public education to church-supported and other private schools that would not be held accountable for how they use the funds. "The proposition is bad public policy," Farley said.

Acknowledging that he may not be a credible source of voter information on a proposition that would have such a devastating impact on the schools of his district, Farley encouraged voters to really learn about the proposition themselves.

"Our experience with voters is that once they really understand the significant flaws in this proposition that they also see that it's a bad law. Educators from throughout the state of California acknowledge the need to improve schools and to offer parents more choice," he said, "but the Voucher Initiative is not the way to do it."

Prior to the Governing Board's adoption of the "No on 174" resolution, it heard statements from Liz Liljestrom and Joan Hosaka.

Liljestrom, president of the local PTA Council, encouraged the Board to adopt the resolution and to also campaign actively against the proposition. She encouraged participation in a "No on 174" rally. Ann Dronenburg, a member of the State Board of Education will be among the speakers at the rally.

Hosaka, representing Lemon Grove teachers, told board members that the proposition features no accountability, permits teachers to instruct children without experience or credentials, and would result in increased taxes to support students presently enrolled in private schools.

PTA rallies against voucher initiative

The Lemon Grove P.T.A. Council is sponsoring a "No On The Voucher (Prop. 174) rally, Saturday, Oct. 16, from 10 a.m. to 12 p.m. at Firemen's Park (at the corner of School Lane and Central Avenue).

Organizers say the purpose of the rally is to create an atmosphere of unity for those opposed to the voucher initiative and draw attention to the P.T.A.'s opposition to Proposition 174.

To achieve these goals there will be booths with information regarding the Initiative and literature provided by various organizations that oppose the proposition. Musical entertainment will be provided by Steve Baker and the Cuyamaca Jazz Band.

Speakers scheduled to appear at various times during the event include Assembly Member Tom Connolly; Janet Gastil, recent candidate for U.S. Congress and former La Mesa-Spring Valley school board member; Dr. Joe Farley, Superintendent of the Lemon Grove School District; and others.

Commentary

Grunge and clunk

by Paul Treske

I seldom write about fashions, but as an observer of the human scene, I am most certainly aware of them. Each generation of young people choose their styles and with them, make their statements. We've had the mini and the midi; we've gone from double breasted to single and back again; lapels have been wide and narrow, as have neckties; pants, both male and female, have gone from wide to narrow to bell-bottomed and hats have come and gone. But, now that we have returned to the '60s and '70s grunge and clunk, I've got to say something.

On the female side, young women today appear to be wearing clothes their grandmothers wore (or the clothes they thought their grandmothers wore). Dresses have no discernable waists and hang aimlessly toward the floor. Very much in, with the teen set, are several layers of totally mismatched jackets, vests, blouses etc., shapeless, styleless and repellent.

But it's the shoes that are the most repellent of all, because the "clunkers" are back. For some, it is the near equivalent of army boots (remember when we used to tease by saying "your mother wears army boots?"). For others, it is the return to the ugly, high-laced "granny shoes" which should have gone out with granny. Still others wear shoes that are so big and clunky, with huge platforms and massive heels, that the loveliest pair of legs are turned into a look that would go well on a Chargers linebacker.

Now, lest you think that I'm only picking on the women, let's take a look at what today's young men are wearing.

Wide is, of course, the operate word for men's trousers. Someday, I suspect, when they are fully grown adults, the skateboarders of 1993 will look at old snapshots of themselves and assume that they had gone through a period of psychosis. Those incredibly wide short pants, worn so low that the undershorts are clearly and mandatorily shown above the waistband, are, without doubt, the funniest style I've seen in all my three-score years. Surely, even they can't believe they are anything but ludicrous, but, being a slavish lot and wishing only to shock their parents, they wear them.

Even those wearing jeans, wear them so wide that one suspects they are trying to hide some hideous malformation of their legs behind all that excess cloth.

Then there is a matter of shoes. Court shoes (we used to call them sneakers or tennies) are still the style but for the young man who wants to be viewed as manly or "in" (or whatever term they use now) those shoes must be black. This seems to go for girls as well, which again does not tend to enhance the leg.

We all know that youngsters choose their fashions in equal parts of peer pressure and defiance of the adult community, so I suppose that we who have aged enough to settle into styles that suit our build, age, coloring and function, must be tolerant of youth. Generally, in fact, I find their clothes a source of amusement and, frequently, have to guard against laughing out loud in their presence. But, being a lifetime appreciator of the "snappy dresser" (even though I am not), I do wish they'd change to something better looking. But then, I'm just one of those old fuddy-duddies.

From Where I Sit

That vicious machine

by Frank Andrews

"How can we possibly leave our home and your business unattended while we are in Canada for the entire summer?" my wife asked, inquisitively.

"We'll just get a telephone answering machine and it will explain everything to the callers. Most people are reluctant to talk to a machine, so a tape will last all summer," I explained to my doubting wife.

We left for our Canadian vacation as scheduled, leaving the house and business in charge of the new machine. It would answer the phone, "Sorry we are away from home for a while, when you hear the beep, please leave your message and we will get back to you as soon as possible."

After only a week into our vacation, we got a long-distance call from our daughter who lived near our home. "Your house has been broken into and the police are here to determine what all was stolen," she said. "Nothing is visibly missing and the situation doesn't look too serious, so why don't you finish your vacation and I'll handle everything for you."

The loss of my cherished coin and stamp collections wasn't known until we returned in the fall. The answering machine was blamed for establishing our absence to a caller who took advantage of a very convenient siuation.

Besides the disheartening loss of my priceless collections, the machine was completely full of messages, mostly concerning my business. Typical of the comments left on the machine by many irritated (former) customers were: "Why don't you folks ever answer your calls?" "If you don't come to hang wallpaper at our place, I'm going to get someone else." "What a way to run a business!" and, the very last recorded call was, "Sorry, Frank, your too late! We already sold our house."

That was the first and last time that we will ever rely on one of those vicious machines to take care of our home and business. Even now, I dread every time I have to talk to one, remembering our horrible experience.

Why NAFTA is the solution to illegal immigration

by Mel Katz, NAFTA Coalition

Why would you leave home (and family), go to a country where you didn't speak the language, didn't know the culture and weren't wanted? Something drastic ... like a job?

That's illegal immigration from Mexico to the United States. The U.S. offers jobs and a better life. Obviously, the way to that is to create jobs in Mexico. How? NAFTA.

The North American Free Trade Agreement will spur economic growth and create jobs in all three countries. That's the conclusion of every reputable study ever conducted.

This is not a novel concept. All immigration is driven by the hope for a better life. That's what made the Pilgrims climb into inadequate boats, cross a dangerous Atlantic Ocean and come to a strange place that no one knew much about.

If they'd had prosperity at home, things would be very different now. And, when we create prosperity in Mexico under NAFTA, things will be very different at our border.

Only economic growth can slow out-migration. The results are in. A 1990 report by the Commission for the Study of International Migration and Cooperative Economic Development concluded that economic growth is the only long-term way to reduce pressure to migrate (Office of the U.S. Trade Representative).

A 1991 publication of the U.S. International Trade Commission concluded that NAFTA will reduce illegal immigration from Mexico to the U.S. (Publication 2353, February 1991). Even better, the result is reduced costs for border control, health care and social services.

Only NAFTA will create the economic growth needed in Mexico. A 1990 U.S. International Trade Commission study concluded NAFTA will result in job creation and increased average wage in Mexico. Even the Economic Policy Institute, which opposes NAFTA and provides information to Ross Perot, estimates that, under NAFTA, illegal immigration will be reduced by more than 1.4 million people over the next six years.

The downside risk is just as clear. If NAFTA isn't enacted, immigration pressure could actually increase. Growth of Mexico's gross domestic product (GDP) slowed down in 1992 (U.S. International Trade Commission, January 1993). That's a real ominous sign.

Other studies predict that the Mexican GDP could grow between 6- and 12-percent more with NAFTA than without it. A 6-percent annual growth rate will create about one million jobs, which means fewer people need to leave to find jobs.

It's time to rethink the border. For too long, we have looked at our border as something that needs to be policed. As the recent study by the Greater San Diego Chamber of Commerce and the San Diego Dialogue concluded, better that we "enlarge our priorities from policing to the promotion of trade and industry. Policing lives off an environment of fear and suspicion. Trade and industry are built on the desire of people to improve their condition" (Planning for Economic Prosperity in the San Diego/Baja California Region," Sept. 30, 1993).

Everyone wants to improve their condition. Let's get NAFTA passed now.

Mel Katz is Executive Officer of Manpower Temporary Services, Chairman of Board of the San Diego Convention Center Corp. and the Private Industry Council and a member of the NAFTA Coalition's Executive Committee. The NAFTA Coalition is a diverse group of business organizations, companies and individuals dedicated to fostering an understanding of NAFTA.

Congressman Hunter and Ross Perot to speak in opposition to NAFTA agreement

Ross Perot will be the featured speaker at an anti-NAFTA rally at the Del Mar Fairgrounds on Saturday afternoon, Oct. 9. Congressman Duncan Hunter also is expected to address the crowd.

The rally, entitled "Not this NAFTA," is being organized and hosted by United We Stand America (UWSA) volunteers from the five congressional districts which are included, totally or in part, within San Diego County.

The rally is free and open to the public. It is expected to draw citizens from throughout the state of California as well as from neighboring Nevada and Arizona.

"This is not just for UWSA members ... it is for everyone concerned that the NAFTA, as it currently is drafted, is not in the best interests of the United States of America," explained Chuck Neeley, who heads the volunteer group organizing the rally.

Neeley, who lives in Ramona, is the elected coordinator for UWSA in the 52nd Congressional District.

The rally begins at 2 p.m., with the gates opening at noon. Parking is free.

Flu campaign to begin early

County Health Services is beginning its annual influenza immunization campaign Oct. 11, in anticipation of a possible early flu season. Officials hope that this, along with the fact that Medicare will now reimburse health care providers for the cost of flu vaccine and its administration to qualified persons, will provide greater access to flu immunization in the county.

"By starting our campaign earlier, we hope to enable more people who need the flu shot to attend one of our flu immunization clinics," said Donald G. Ramras, M.D., county health officer. "And, in view of the new reimbursement provision, persons on Medicare may wish to go to their regular physician. The point is that any person over the age of 60 or anyone with certain chronic health problems should get this important vaccine protection."

Flu shots will be offered at county public health centers (and other locations) in special clinics which will continue through the month of November. The shots will also be available at regularly scheduled immunization clinics throughout the winter while vaccine supplies last.

Flu immunization information lines have been established to provide taped information on eligibility, sites, dates and hours of the immunization clinics. Information will be available by calling 236-2351.

According to Dr. Ramras, immunizations will be provided to the following:

- Persons 60 years of age and older;
- Adults and children with chronic cardiovascular or pulmonary system conditions (including children with asthma), kidney or metabolic diseases (including diabetes mellitus), anemia or an impaired immune system serious enough to have required regular medical follow-up or hospitalization within the last year;
- Persons infected with HIV, the virus that causes AIDS;
- Children and teenagers (6 months through 18 years of age) on long-term aspirin therapy;
- Household members of persons in the above risk groups;
- Medical care providers of persons in the above risk groups.

Children and teenagers (6 months through 17 years of age) will only be given flu vaccine by appointment because a more extensive medical history and different vaccine dosages are generally needed.

"If a person in a high-risk group was immunized last year, he or she needs to be immunized this year," Dr. Ramras said. "Vaccine protection only lasts for the duration of a flu season, and strains of flu change from year to year."

Adults receiving the flu immunization at county public health clinics may also obtain the pneumococcal and tetanus-diphtheria vaccines, if the shots are indicated.

There is a $4 fee for each shot, which may be waived if the person is unable to pay.

The item that broke the calm was a discussion regarding the use of official city letterhead stationery by council members. Officials from other cities had brought to Mayor Cochran's attention letters which they had received from Councilman Craig Lake. Cochran felt that the additions which Lake had made to the letterhead (listing Matthew Kahn as "Chief of Staff" and N. Scott Grant as "Executive Administrator" could create a potential liability for the city, as well as mislead recipients as to the real significance of the titles. Cochran stated that one recipient had asked "what happened to Jack Shelver," because the letterhead had led him to believe that he was gone.

Cochran had also asked the city attorney to research the potential liability created by Lake's volunteer "staff." City Attorney Don McLean, while making it clear that he was not trying to set policy or take sides in the issue, made it clear that the city had exposure to great unknown liabilities by the unofficial staff positions created by council members or others.

Cochran also objected to the fact that one of Lake's letters, written on official letterhead stationery had recommended an acquaintence and her company to council members in other cities.

Lake stated that he didn't think that he had done anything wrong, and that if Cochran had a problem with something he should approach him directly instead of going behind closed doors, adding, "It stinks to me; why didn't I get any communication?"

After more heated discussion, Councilwoman Heiserman (mom) tried to make peace in the family, but the "bad blood" that exists is most likely going to create more explosions.

Councilman Jerry Legerton moved that they prohibit the altering of the official letterhead and the granting of titles which might mislead the public. Lake explained that he did not want to jeopardize the city in any way, and expressed his approval of the motion, which passed 4-0.

Reader responds to anti-Proposition 174 editorial

Dear Editor:

In the commentary, Sept. 2, Mr. Treske faults Proposition 174, the Education Voucher Initiative.

Mr. Treske has been conned by the very educators who hold our children hostage in the failed public school system, rife with incompetence. He suggests we patch up this already moribund system with more tax dollars and energy, forgetting we have increased public school expenditures twofold the past decade only to make a rotten situation worse, to the detriment of many of our students. Compared internationally, test results show our students rank at the bottom of the industrial world. We are even behind countries such as Hungary, Taiwan, Singapore and Bosnia.

The purpose of the Voucher Initiative is to take us out of this educational nosedive which imperils not only the future of our children but threatens the ability of our nation to compete worldwide. This proposition establishes $2600 grants to parents to be used in schools of their choice, public or private. Parents, rather than public educators, will control the educational destinies of their children by selecting the very best schools, teachers, and curriculum to meet individual student goals. This is true democracy. The present school system has failed. Give it an F.

Paradoxically, a significant enrollment loss in the public school system due to vouchers will actually make more money available to public schools. Contrary to the "gutting" Mr. Treske forecasts in his gloomy commentary, the net result will be a substantial savings to taxpayers while, at the same time, providing a decent education to our children. Thus, down the road, we will have better educated citizens. Not only will the public school system have more money available, it will have fewer students and smaller class sizes. Overall, this will call for a reduction in the number of public educators and the opportunity to weed out the incompetent, including those presently protected by tenure. Result: leaner, more competent and competitive public schools. Hence, all students, public or private, benefit from vouchers. In addition to the savings noted above, there will be less need for public facilities and their attendant costs.

Mr. Treske casts unwarranted fears that a multitude of "oddly sectarian schools" will sprout up to suck off voucher money from the unwary. In the first place, this insults the intelligence of parents and other voters. In the second place, the state already regulates private schools in regard to curriculum and testing. And finally, what could be more fraudulent than a public school system which hands diplomas to uneducated graduates.

The voucher system will sprout a proliferation of very fine schools interested in the future of their students. Another thing - the initiative gives any school, public and private, the right to dismiss students who "derive no substantial academic benefit" or who are responsible for "serious or habitual misconduct." Thus, there is no value to the claim that the public schools will be the catch-all for discipline problems and students who don't want to learn.

The commentary states most "quality private schools" cost more than the voucher grant. However, even in these schools the grant will cover a good part of the expense and parents can negotiate. On the other hand, there are many less-expensive, quality schools which make $2,600 a very attractive and affordable investment in a child's future. Educators give lip-service to the desire for parent involvement. Here it is!

Without the voucher, parents have no choice. With it, they do. It is hard to imagine anyone denying this wonderful opportunity to our children.
